PART C(20pts.)

Essay.

We have stressed the importance of asking questions during the term. The ability to teach others to think critically is the most essential task of Christian Education. We do not want our students to be passive recipients, we want them to actively participate in producing knowledge. We learned that Christian Education must serve as the principal medium for developing in people the attitudes and skills of theological, social and cultural criticism. If you had the opportunity to teach a class entitled "Introduction to Christian Education", what are five things you would do? In essay form, with an introduction, body and conclusion, explain what you would do and illustrate with concrete examples.
